A Little Spark

Lily was five when Grandma and Grandpa took her to the ballet. The curtains opened. A dancer stepped into the light. Her skirt floated as she turned. Lily sat very still. Even her toes seemed to be listening. When the music stopped, she squeezed Grandma's hand. "I want to be a ballerina!" she whispered. Grandpa smiled. "Then this is a wonderful place for your dream to begin."

Let’s imagine together

- What do you think the dancer is imagining as she turns?
- What dream would you share with someone who loves you?
- If you were on that stage, what would your dance be about?
